COMMISSIONS SPLIT; STRONG PROTEST FAILS

IN the face of strenuous opposition from Councilmen John Catlin and J. A. Burge, who opposed it on first reading, the ordinance amending Ordinance No. 2, "splitting" the commission of fire and police, passed its second reading at the council meeting Wednesday evening. Catlin again asked to be relieved as commissioner of fire and police, as an alternative to the change proposed by Mayor Thoburn. The mayor refused, stating no other councilman was so well suited to be commissioner of police. Catlin weighted his argument against the new set-up, police and lights under one head, fire and water, with the hint that the police and light departments are essentially inimicable in Carmel, that heading such a commission it might be his unpleasant duty to insist on the village being brightly lighted at night. Burge, who seemed to take the matter deeply to heart, again accused the fire department of "playing politics," though he also appeared to agree with Catlin that it was "pure fiction" that the fire department wanted Rowntree as commissioner of fire.

"What's more," declared the peppery street commissioner, "they aren't a volunteer fire department. They cost the city plenty!" He called attention to a warrant passed in June, bestowing awards of some $166 on members of the department. The impression was given during the discussion and reading of amounts to individual firemen that such payments were made each month; department officials, queried afterwards, explained that the June payments were semi-annual awards, based on earning of merit points for the previous six months.

After the passing of the ordinance by the same three-two vote as before, Burge demanded, "Now that you're splitting things up, I'd like to be relieved of parks, signs and sewers. Streets are enough for one man to handle." Mayor Thoburn smiled and ignored the request.

Having discovered that the water company is willing to tunnel under the great old pine at Ocean and Casanova, death warrant of which was signed at a previous council meeting, Mayor Thoburn asked that the motion permitting the tree to be removed be rescinded.

"That matter was left to my discretion, Mr. Mayor," Burge reminded him, "and I haven't decided what I'm going to do about it." With the good-natured recovery which is characteristic of the street commissioner in his hotter moments, he smiled, added, "Though I realize that I actually haven't any authority in the matter." This was verified when City Attorney Argyll Campbell referred back to the ordinance about trees, discovered an amendment to the effect that only the council as a whole can order the removal of trees.

Convenience of the water company in laying new eight-inch mains down Ocean avenue was also considered in the proposal by Burge

Forty-five New Pupils Commence School as Sunset's Term Opens

Signs Upon City Property Must Go Before Sept. 15

Sept. 15 is the deadline for all signs on city property. Street Commissioner Burge announced at the council meeting Wednesday evening. If not down by that time they will be forcibly removed.

"Are you going to include balconies?" asked Councilman Catlin.

"They are not an advertising device," retorted Burge. "I favor giving permits for balconies."

"You can't give permits which violate the law," Catlin exclaimed.

City Attorney Campbell clarified the matter, declared it within the province of the council to give permits for balconies. He favored a building ordinance which would clarify some of these obscure points, though more liberal, in keeping with village traditions, than one based on the Pacific Building Code, favored by peninsula architects.

Minges-Juillard Nuptials Held

STATELY ceremonial and beautiful appointments distinguished the wedding of Miss Marion Minges and Jean Juillard, Jr., at Del Monte chapel Wednesday afternoon at 4:30, with Rev. Ernest J. Bradley reading the marriage lines. The bride was attired in a formal white and silver floral brocade gown, with a hat of white and cloth-of-silver and long white gloves. She carried an arm bouquet of gardenias, bouvardia and lilies-of-the-valley. Her sister, Mrs. Audrey Hull of Hollister as matron-of-honor wore a royal blue metal-cloth cocktail frock with silver hat and shoes and carried Talisman roses.

Miss Florence Edler of Carmel and Mrs. Simone Hotaling of Woodside, sister of Mr. Juillard, were the bridesmaids; Miss Edler in a frock of iridescent violet-blue with silver accessories, Mrs. Hotaling wearing printed chiffon with small hat of harmonizing shade. Both carried pale yellow roses. Little Simone Hotaling, the flower girl, was attired in a hand-made French frock of baby-blue.

Jean Juillard Sr. attended his son as groomsman and the ushers were Bennie Bennedetti of San Mateo and George Hotaling of Woodside. About 100 guests attended the wedding and were entertained afterwards at a cocktail party in the lounge of the Hotel San Carlos.

The bridal couple chose a boat trip north for the wedding tour, planning to stop at Vancouver and Victoria, then to motor down the coast to Monterey, where after Sept. 26 they will be at home in their apartment at the San Carlos.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Minges of Carmel and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jean Juillard Sr. of Monterey.

WITH approximately the same registration figures as the first week last year, Sunset school reconvened Tuesday with 360 pupils attending. This will be augmented considerably when late vacationers return. There are 45 pupils new to the school this year; 25 in the kindergarten and 20 scattered through the other grades.

Several changes in teacher assignments were necessary after the opening day, due to unexpectedly large classes in some grades. The present line-up: Mrs. Anna Kohner, kindergarten; Mrs. Lilly Trowbridge, low first; Miss Bernice Riley, low second and high second; Mrs. Edna Lockwood, high first and high third; Mrs. Bernita Ninneman, low third; Mrs. Frances Farley, fourth; Miss Althea Kendall, low and high fifth; R. J. Gale, low sixth; Mrs. Frances Johnson, seventh; Miss Anna Marie Baer, eighth; Mrs. Ann Uzzell, low sixth and high eighth. The divisions were made in this way, explains Principal O. W. Bardarson, in order to balance the teacher load.

Appreciable expansion and improvement in curriculum are expected this year, and more materials will be available for the children to work with. The weekly Tuesday noon conferences of teachers are to be based on an attempt to understand present conditions and to consider, in their light, a philosophy of education; to achieve a psychological approach to practical situations and subject matter. The year's problem will be the development of applicable aims and further integration of subject matter.

Next Monday, Admission Day, will be a holiday, and at the end of this week class-room attention will be directed to the history of California's beginnings. Next Tuesday the boys' gym periods will begin, and touch-tackle is already underway as the outside sport, though teams have not yet been lined up. Organization of student body activities will begin next week, and nomination of officers may be held.

Sunset is to have a half-time school nurse this year, but the position has not yet been filled.

Red Cross Garments for Carmel's Needy

One of the least known yet important activities of the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross is its clothing department. Needy families, and there are many such, are fitted out with garments and shoes sent in by residents of Carmel. Many tales could be told of help given in this way by Mrs. John W. Dickinson, who has charge of this special work and is on duty one afternoon of each week at the Red Cross rooms. If an urgent need arises at any other time it is cared for by Miss Leslie King, the case worker. Many boxes of garments for children of school age have been given to Sunset school, Mrs. Bernita Ninneman having charge of this activity working in cooperation with the Red Cross. The great need at the moment is for children's shoes of all sizes, which will be gratefully received at the headquarters on Dolores.

Carmel Playhouse to Change Its Name to Filmarte for Pictures

CARMEL PLAYHOUSE, re-named the Filmarte, has been leased to Central California Theaters, and will become a motion picture house, with two programs every evening and a daily matinee.

The Filmarte will open on Tuesday, Sept. 17, with the celebrated "Chu Chin Chow," a gorgeous musical film of the Arabian Nights. According to Richard Bare, local manager for the lessees, the opening will be followed by a brilliant list of pictures most of which have not been seen on the peninsula. He states that the equipment will be the latest and the finest on the market.

By special arrangement with the owners of the property, Edward and Gabrielle Kuster, who have made an alliance with the well-known Hollywood Filmarte, an international series will be established by the lessees. On Wednesday and Thursday of each week an outstanding foreign film will be shown. French, British, German, Spanish and Russian pictures have been booked far into the season. "Man of Aran" and "Chapayev," two of the biggest European hits of the year, will be shown during the first month of operation, according to Manager Bare.

"Reservations made by the lessors in the lease will preserve the Playhouse for the community's own drama, opera and concert music," Mr. Kuster said.

Much interest has been shown in the announcement by the Filmarte management that the admission price for all members of the Peninsula Film Club has been reduced to 25 cents. Mr. Bare said: "I take pleasure in confirming the statement that my company has made an agreement with the Film Club under which its members will be admitted to all pictures for 25 cents. Our ultimate aim, after a year or so of operation, is to reduce the general admission price to this figure. This, however, can only be accomplished through volume of attendance. We believe our programs will arouse the interest of the whole peninsula. We are particularly confident that Carmel will respond enthusiastically to this new kind of motion picture house."

The summer stock engagement of the Pinon Players at the Playhouse terminating with this week-end's production of "The Late Christopher Bean," will be followed by a week's installation of equipment, after which a continuous motion picture schedule will be commenced.

Rev. Austin B. Chinn Is Welcomed Home

Welcoming the rector, Rev. Austin B. Chinn and Mrs. Chinn on their return from a month's stay at Huntington Lake, and at the same time extending a farewell courtesy to Mrs. C. French Kennedy, members of All Saints Guild gave a tea at the parish house Tuesday afternoon. Official hostess was Mrs. John W. Dickinson, the guild president, assisted by Mrs. Alfred H. Wheldon and Mrs. Ellen Rose, who presided at the beautifully appointed tea-table. An arrangement of lavender candles in silver candlesticks, centered with lavender stocks formed a charming decorative scheme. To Mrs. Kennedy was presented a leather bag as a farewell gift from her friends and co-workers of the guild.

Gerry Thienes Made "Miss General Manager"

"Miss General Manager," in lieu of Philip L. Gildred, the customary incumbent of that post at the California Pacific International Exposition in San Diego, was the role enacted by Gerry Thienes, Tuesday, Sept. 3, at the World's Fair.

The young lady, who lives in Carmel and assists her father, Tom Thienes, at the Central Coast Counties in the California State Building as a hostess, was third place winner in the beauty and personality contest held for girl workers at America's Exposition last week.

Gerry, a most exceedingly charming young lady, made no especial shakeup in the world's fair personnel during her reign.

Mrs. W. R. Holman Gives Talk On Mexico at Musical Arts Meet

WARM and sympathetic insight into the problems of the people of Mexico and a great appreciation of their craft work, ancient and modern, was evinced by Mrs. W. R. Holman, who presented the program for the first autumn meeting of the Musical Arts Club Tuesday evening at the Van Ess-MacGowan home in the Country Club. Witty and vividly Mrs. Holman described the route of her summer's tour of Mexico, spoke with pity, touched with indignation, of the hard plight of the poor Indian peon, refuted the canard that "Mexicans are lazy," described them as "trudging all day long" sharing with their diminutive donkeys the role of Mexico's beast of burden. Centuries of repression and exploitation, she said, have left a mark on Mexico's people which only other centuries under more enlightened regimes can remove. She saw more hope for the peons in the objective of the present regime to restore the land to the Indians. Two particularly vivid bits of description were of going out into the jungles from Orizaba, which the speaker described in all their tropical richness, with orchids and gardenias common as wayside flowers; and of running into a native fiesta in Esperanza.

Mrs. Holman's audience had the opportunity to share her joy in the exotic colors, textures, and forms of art, for she had with her, and passed from hand to hand, much of the booty from her trip; dozens of interesting picture-postals; pottery, glass-ware, leather-work, excellent lithographic reproductions of Rivera murals, even, oddly enough, some framed bits of Gobelin tapestries.

Edward C. Hopkins was in charge of the musical portion of the program, and presented two of his pupils, Eddie George, who sang the two Spanish-American folk songs, "Estrellita" and "Cielito Lindo," and Miss Lucille Roberts, who gave the lovely Carmena waltz-song. It was announced that Miss Roberts will be presented in a farewell recital next Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the lounge at Del Monte. Mr. Hopkins himself sang two California folk-songs which he learned from his grandmother as a little boy.

Temperamental Godiva Tries To Ring In Horse

Who would have thought that, of all celebrities, the Lady Godiva would be the one to allow herself the indulgence of temperament? But such is the fact; which developed when Lady Godiva rode up on her prancing white horse to the studio of Armin Hansen, the lusty president of the Carmel Art Association, to buy tickets for herself and her steed for the Bal Masque to be held by the artists of the Monterey peninsula on Sept. 21 at the Hotel Del Monte.

Refused the sale of a ticket for her horse, the diva flew into a rage at the husky president, who took refuge behind a large palette dripping with paint, from which protection he arranged a compromise with the wilful lady to the effect that she might bring her horse but that she herself must come dressed in a suit of cellophane!

Oh! these artists!

P-T. A. to Show SERA Paintings

Paintings recently completed at Sunset school under the SERA art project will be on exhibition at the first fall meeting of Sunset P-T. A., to be held next Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 10, after school. Artists who executed them will be invited to be present and speak about their work. Not only old members but all parents, teachers, those interested in children, school activities and art are invited by Miss Clara Kellogg, the president, to attend the meeting, which will take the form of a tea and will be held in the first grade room.

At a recent P-T. A. board meeting, the following financial statement was read: Receipts:—balance, July 1, 1934, $231.39; membership dues, $242.00; carnival (net), $175.35; interest, $5.92; sundries, $7.94; Community Chest (for milk), $73.00; contributions, $92.48. Total receipts, $657.44. Total assets, $888.83.

Expenditures were as follows: County and state dues, $37.83; hospitality, $24.63; care of children, $4.00; welfare, $208.26; health, $116.64; art project and miscellaneous, $151.70; sundries, $18.64. Total, $561.70. Balance, $327.13.

ROWNTREE HAS GRANDSON

Councilman Bernard Rowntree became a grandfather this week, with the birth of a son, Rowan Allan, to Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Rowntree of Gasquet Ranger Station. The boy was born Monday, Sept. 2, and weighed seven pounds. Mrs. Rowntree is the former Harriette Hasty, daughter of Mrs. Louise Hasty.

Pfremmers Lose Possession of Sun

JUDGMENT handed down by the superior court in the suit of E. F. Bunch against A. E. and Eureka Pfremmer, in which the Pfremmers filed a cross complaint, involving the Carmel Sun, caused considerable surprise in Carmel. Judge Jorgensen decided in Bunch's favor, and the Sun reverts to his ownership. Mr. and Mrs. Pfremmer, who have made many friends during their months here, left Saturday for Baxter Springs, Kansas, returning to a previous home.

The Sun will be published hereafter on Thursdays instead of Tuesdays, according to Jesse Bunch, who has been operating a place in New Monterey.

The following letter was received from Mr. Pfremmer:

Editor Carmel Pine Cone:

Before bidding your enchanting community farewell, which we are doing with great reluctance, we wish your kind permission to express our heartfelt appreciation of the very friendly attitude of the people toward us in our trouble and for the many expressions of sympathy we have heard since the suit for possession of the Carmel Sun was decided against us. We shall always remember with pleasure the many friendships we have gained here.

Like hundreds of people in Carmel who are well acquainted with the facts, the outcome of the trial was astounding. It is enough to make the Goddess of Justice want to discard her scales. When dealt by human hands justice sometimes goes astray, but before the Court of Eternity we are assured that every one will get what is honestly due him.

We wish also to thank the Pine Cone staff for numerous acts of fraternal courtesy and assure you that our relations have been very pleasing indeed to us.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pfremmer.

JEFFERS AMONG "FOUR GREATEST POETS IN U. S."

Jeffers has received the final accolade; he is even recognized in the movies. One of our correspondents reports seeing the film "Jalna" in San Francisco last week. One of the characters discussed "the four greatest poets in America." Robinson Jeffers was one of the group named.

"Second Man" Least Pleasing of Any Pinon Offering to Date

By THELMA B. MILLER

"THE SECOND MAN," the Behrman comedy presented at the Playhouse by the Pinon Players at the end of last week and for the evening of Labor Day, was the least satisfactory thing they have done this season. People who perchance saw this play only, should not judge this very able company by that production. It was partly the fault of the play, which drags in spots and could bear cutting, particularly that interminable scene in which young Monica iterates and reiterates her love for Clark Storey, the self-confessed third-rate author, and gets nowhere. In fact that theme goes through several scenes in the play, and it's rather trivial material about which to build a whole play.

Franklin Wilbur has shown himself such a fine and talented actor during the summer stock season, that it is only with great reluctance and in the interests of reportorial integrity, that we must say he was distinctly disappointing in this play. He heavily over-acted the part, using a technique that might be appropriate for a Shakespearean role, but not for light comedy. Save that we remember his really delightful work in "There's Always Juliet" earlier in the season we would be tempted to say that juvenile leads are not his forte.

While Bonnie Finkbohner shows great promise and has made observable progress during the season, she is not yet ready for a role as long and exacting as Monica Grey. It calls for a very skilled ingenue to lift it from monotony.

Bette Hyde, borrowed by the Players from the ranks of the local amateur thespians, was a distinct adornment to the production. Her grace, maturity, poise, and her lovely speaking voice made Kendall Frayne, the wealthy widow also angling for the affections of the fickle author, an appealing and sympathetic character. Miss Hyde should be much in demand after this part, which, much more than the role which she played in "The Ghost Train" last winter, shows what she can really do.

Evert Sholund came closer to his best work than in any part he has played since his memorable "Joe," in Martin Flavin's "Sunday" last autumn. As the tongue-tied, love-lorn chemist, who acquires Monica on the rebound after she decides that she now sees the shallow Storey in his true colors, he managed to give the role considerable variety and color, was particularly good in his mordant denunciation of Storey.

Education Chief to Speak at Pacific Grove

Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of education, will be one of the outstanding speakers at the three-day convention of the California State School Trustees Association, which is expected to bring some 200 delegates to Pacific Grove tomorrow, Sunday and Monday. School trustees of the entire county are acting as hosts to their state brethren in this affair. Mr. Kersey will be the speaker at the session of tomorrow noon, to be held at Forest Hill hotel, though most of the general meetings will be held in the auditorium at Pacific Grove high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hilbert are vacationing for two weeks at Gold Lake.

GIVE FIRE PREVENTION GOSPEL

To edify as well as entertain, the fire department at its benefit whist party last week gave a startling demonstration of the inflammability of gasoline fumes, along with a number of other "acts" spreading the gospel of fire prevention. While the more timorous fully expected to see Manzanita hall go up in smoke, the firemen set the stage. A metal trough was inclined from mantelpiece to floor end. At the upper end stood the demonstrator, with a swab dipped in gasoline, but wrung out so that it did not drip. All lights save the candle were extinguished, and the swab was held at the top of the trough. Slowly the candle flame swelled. Then a glowing ball broke away, rolled fantastically up the trough. When it reached the swab, flames burst out, were hastily extinguished in a handy bucket.

All this was to demonstrate that it is never safe to use gasoline inside a house, no matter how cautious you think you are. The subtle fumes have a way of seeking out a flame to ignite them, blow house and contents to Kingdom Come.

The firemen also demonstrated how carefully they take care of furniture and bric-a-brac when fighting fires; explained their salvage equipment and conducted a question-and-answer examination in fire hazards.

Watchers Breathless as Artist Chiura Obata Creates Sketches

YOU would not realize how very quiet 35 people can be unless you had seen that many breathless watchers gathered about Chiura Obata's work table at Tilly Polak's Friday afternoon, while the celebrated Japanese artist and teacher painted quick sketches for them. Most artists are pretty exclusive about the actual execution of their work, people hanging over their shoulders give them the jitters. But the perfect self-discipline and monumental technique of Obata enabled him to proceed with equanimity in the face of all those owl-like eyes; not only to paint but to imagine and create his designs while we watched.

Obata says that before considering himself ready to exhibit, he painted some 10,000 pictures. At the rate in which he turned them out Friday afternoon, that would not take very long to accomplish. But the nonchalant facility with which he mixed his colors, used brushes ranging in size from one drawing a line as fine as a pen to one comparable to a house painter's smaller tool, bespoke toilsome hours behind closed doors, acquiring this agile technique which now enables him to transfer images to rice-paper in a few moments only.

This interesting demonstration was given at the tea and reception to the artist and his family, which marked the opening of the display of his paintings which may be seen at Tilly Polak's shop until Sept. 12. His is a crafty blending of traditional Oriental art with ultra-modern ideas. A few strokes of his brush suggests an elaborate composition, which the imagination of the beholder fills in. Oddly enough, a quick, oblique glance at one of his paintings gives you the full message, gazing long and fully at it the composition seems to evaporate into a jumble of bright-colored lines. You have to turn away, then look again, to see it truly.

The dancing human figure has a particular fascination for the Japanese artist; it is the subject for many of the pictures in his show here. But he also does most realistic still-lives, exquisite flower studies, and he shows several little masterpieces painted on silk, the texture of the fabric entering suavely into the composition. Be sure to see "Shadow Under a Full Moon"; it is universally acclaimed. And ask Miss Polak to show you the one with the morning-glories, she describes it accurately as "touching."

Grove High School Sets Enrollment Mark

With a freshman class of over 80, the Pacific Grove high school opened with an enrollment the highest it has been for several years. A new course in public speaking is being taught and instruction is being given in art craft. The students are enthusiastic. Mrs. Walton, who with her daughter Marion, have come to Pacific Grove from Taft, will instruct in English and public speaking, in the absence of Miss Vega Swift, who will be unable to return to the faculty for some time.

Commissions Are Split By Council

to narrow sidewalks from 12 to eight feet on the south side of the street. Mayor Thoburn said there must be further study before this matter is decided, and it was put over to a special meeting of September 11 at which time, as a result of a query by Catlin, matter of calling a bond election for a new fire house will be discussed.

"Has the committee come to any agreement as to what they will ask for?" asked the mayor.

"No, I can't say we have," answered Catlin. The committee was understood to have deadlocked over Catlin's wish to include a cell block in the fire house. Thoburn has wished a unanimous report before calling an election.

Again laid over for further consideration were requests for refund of a portion of the $100 license fee paid by new businesses, from Edna Deakin and Mrs. T. J. Preston. Since closing her shop, Miss Deakin said, she continued to carry on her business at home. Mrs. Preston, at the end of the summer, left her stock on consignment here, reopening on her return this year.

The tax ordinance and one giving Mrs. Abbie L. McReavie permission to build a service station also passed second reading.

BUILDING DROPS OFF

Building permit figures dropped again for August, after holding up well through a summer which has seen considerable new construction, much alteration and minor improvements. Seven jobs last month came to a total of $3410, against $15,990 for July and $8,286 for June. Largest job started in August was the $1,000 cottage which Ferdinand Kretz is building for himself at Carpenter and Second.

ATTEND FRIENDS MEET

From Carmel Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brinton, vacationing here, and Bernard Rowntree went up to Mills College last week-end to attend the Pacific Coast conference of Friends, discussing international peace. Mr. Brinton presided at the conference. Mr. Rowntree returned Monday and the Brintons came back Tuesday to complete their vacation before the reopening of Mills, where Mrs. Brinton is dean of the faculty.

Arthur T. Shand has returned from New York City where he was called a number of weeks ago by the illness of his mother.

Guests of Etta Stackpole over the week-end and holiday were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rappe of Watsonville.

JOE IS DRIVING HIS PATRONS AROUND IN A BEAUTIFUL NEW PACKARD 120

Here's how it happened:

So many people wanted a ride in PACKARD 120, the Stahl Motor Company, Monterey, could not keep up with the demand. When Joe heard this he went right over to see William Stahl.

"Is that the car everybody wants to ride in?"

Mr. Stahl nodded.

"Then that's the car I want for a taxi." And Joe went over the PACKARD 120 from fenders to tail lights, as only a taxi driver can, then drove around the block in it. "I don't wonder folks like to ride in it," he said. "And I want a car they'll be proud to be seen in, and one they enjoy riding in so much, they'll look me up whenever they want to go anywhere."

"The answer to that is PACKARD 120," said Mr. Stahl.

"O K—" said Joe. And as the cost of PACKARD 120 is as low as its quality is high, a deal was promptly made.

So if it's a taxi you want, call Carmel 202-W, or just step into Joe's beautiful sedan on Ocean at Dolores.

And if it's a car you want, call Monterey 7650, Stahl Motor Company, and William Stahl will gladly demonstrate "America's Outstanding Motor Achievement for 1935."

Need of Eternal Vigilance for Women Stressed

ONLY eternal vigilance of women will enable them to keep the gains they have made in the long, painful struggle upward from the "harem psychology," according to Maud Younger, veteran of the suffrage battle and now, as for many years, an executive of the Woman's Party, one of the most powerful and effective lobbies in Washington, D. C. Miss Younger has been visiting for several weeks here with her sister, the Baroness Alice Nugent, and will remain for some months in California, resting and writing, before returning to Washington and the fray.

The Woman's Party is at present gearing all its resources for a fight to the finish on the equal rights amendment to the constitution, Miss Younger says. Quietly but steadily, sentiment is growing for the bill, and women learned patience and persistence in the long fight for the right to vote. Oddly enough, women of leisure and some of the women's organizations which had no true understanding of the provisions of the equal rights measure have provided the factors which have delayed its passage, according to the expert lobbyist. But with events of the past few years a change in sentiment is developing, and organizations hitherto cool to the proposition are now beginning to study it—"and that is all we ask!" says Miss Younger.

"That section of the president's economy bill which provided that if two 'married persons' were both employed by the federal government one of them must be discharged, has had tragic results," Miss Younger declared. "We succeeded in having struck from it the worst discriminatory clause, for it was originally specified that married women working for the government must be discharged if their husbands were also federal employees. But this measure must be repealed. It has caused some of the government's most efficient servants to be discharged. It has resulted in divorces, clandestine marriage, and extramarital unions. After all, what more natural that that government employees, thrown together in their work, should wish to marry each other?"

The equal rights amendment, she pointed out, would do away with the government's discrimination against women, and help to check the growing pressure on private industry to discharge women, give their jobs to unemployed men.

"It isn't going to solve the unemployment problem to give jobs to one group of citizens at the expense of another," Miss Younger declared. "Women are not working as a fad, but as grim economic necessity."

In view of the changed conditions of the past few years, Miss Younger indicated that such organizations as hers have changed their policy in such measures as minimum wage and hour laws for women. A safeguard against exploitation when women are firmly entrenched in the economic world, they become a weapon against them when their tenure of jobs is precarious at best. They result in the wholesale discharge of women, hiring of men who can take lower wages, work longer hours.

Miss Younger is a native daughter of California, descendant of two pioneer families who came to San Francisco in the days of '49. She went into the suffrage movement in the days when it was necessary to demonstrate how "lady-like" were the women asking the privilege of the vote, went on after the victory in California to press the issue in Washington, where a show of teeth and strength replaced the vaporish female. She went through the thrilling days of militant suffrage, was one of those politically wise women who realized that the battle for "women's rights" began there, had not ended.

Through Miss Younger's anecdotes of measures the group has sponsored, one sees lobbying as not thoroughly iniquitous, but actually necessary in the protection of legislation which can be so quickly emasculated or defeated in "deals" behind locked doors.

Miss Younger is Congressional chairman of the Woman's Party, and so has been brought into intimate contact with all the important national figures through several administrations, and is also chairman of the finance committee. She participated as chairman in the first and only "lobby" of the supreme court, in an unsuccessful attempt to save the Woman's party's Washington home from condemnation as a site for the new supreme court building.

Marya Ostrava Tomorrow Night

TOMORROW evening the Denny-Watrous Gallery presents Marya Ostrava in a recital of songs from Slavic lands. Each group of songs will have its own authentic costume. Carol van Alstyne will be at the piano.

Marya Ostrava was born in this country, child of a Czech mother. The first songs she ever heard were folk songs sung to her by her mother, and the strange beauty of these melodies made an indelible impression upon the young Marya. Gifted with a fresh, natural and lovely voice, the young girl made a comprehensive study of Slavic song with the purpose of presenting this colorful and for the most part unknown music to American audiences. This she is doing with outstanding success.

Marya Ostrava sings her songs in English. The most of them are from manuscript, and have never, so far as is known, been heard before in English. The young singer's gift for pantomime and mimicry make her program delightful.

The program will include "Little Wild Goose," (Moravia), "Sedlak," (Czechia), "Come you here, Laddies," (Slovakia); four Czechish songs, "When I See Thee," "Wedding Song," "Once Went a Farmer," and "Lullaby"; songs by a Russian grandmother, "Little Duckling," "Baba Yaga," "Gooslee Tune," songs from the Ukraine, "Behind the Forest," "The High Mountain," "Cradle Song," and songs by a Slovakian goose girl, "Dancing, Dancing Went the Daughter," "Macieke," and "Annie, the Miller's Daughter."

Marya Ostrava in the manner of her folk song presentation might best be compared to Ann Matha, whose singing of Norwegian folk dramas in the Denny-Watrous Gallery three years ago, has not yet been forgotten.

Carol van Alstyne will play two piano solos, as an added attraction to the program.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

THE girl who has played mother-confessor, chaperone and diet supervisor to a group of idealistic young people just out of school and having their first fling at the professional theater, to say nothing of directing nearly all of the 15 performances of the Pinon Players, sits back and regards the results of her first season in summer stock, and says, "Carmel has been swell to us!" Younger than some of the members of her playing group, Harriet Smith has nevertheless exerted a quiet authority that has never been questioned. If she has not stamped the individual actors with her personality, the group as a whole have maintained a fine standard in their relations with the community which traces back directly to Miss Smith.

Remembering not that there have been empty seats at every performance, but that there has been a gradual "build-up" through the summer, she makes no complaint about not being "appreciated," but just voices that grateful tribute, in the argot of youth—"Carmel has been swell to us!"

Harriet Smith knew she had a monumental task in opening "cold" in Carmel with a summer stock company, a venture pretty well unheard of on the Pacific coast. She may not have foreseen all the details and complications and the really phenomenal hard work she and her confreres have taken in their stride. But she was willing to make the gamble, not expecting things to be too easy, for the sake of the experience, establishing her name and building for the future. The Players have assured a warm welcome for their return next year, and we're all sorry to see them close this week, with the end of the summer.

As much as it is possible to put her directorial philosophy into words, Miss Smith avoids superimposing her own ideas and personality upon those of her players. She gives them the broad foundation, explains the logic of their major "business," lets them develop their own conception of character with just a shaping touch here and there. From the players themselves we learn that she is a kind, calm and considerate director, able to get results without either driving or irritating the actors. It is something in this system that is responsible for the growth and development that has been marked from week to week in members of the company.

Daughter of a farmer who has been a "good sport" about seeing his brood desert the soil and take to the arts, Miss Smith went first to College of the Pacific, where in the drama department, she had the opportunity of taking over part of the work of the director, De Marcus Brown, when he fell ill during her last year in school. Then to Yale, where she took her degree as master of fine arts after three strenuous years. A class of 60 started, thinned out to 13 who graduated. You have to be able to "take it," "it" including a good bit of hard physical labor in stagecraft, to get through the Yale school of the theater. Out of the 13 who graduated in Miss Smith's class, all but three aspired to teach—this answers in part the question of what to do with these able and well-grounded young people who prepared themselves for an exacting profession. Not so many of them survive to go into actual work with the theater.

If Miss Smith has "temperament," she keeps it well concealed. She stresses her strictly "practical" approach to the theater, has a tolerant smile for the ideal of "elevating the public taste." She says so emphatically that she believes in giving people what they want, we suspect a certain amount of disillusionment somewhere along the line, when she discovered that people mostly are not very much interested in the "finer things." She has a real love for the theater, even the "dirty work" which her characteristic impassivity does not conceal.

She and her brother Yancey are so much alike in voice, appearance and mannerisms they might pass for twins; actually, Yancey is the younger. It has been a great source of pride and satisfaction to the young directress to have her brother associated with her this summer, and to direct his first play. There is the sort affection and mutuality of interest between them that should be found in all families, but generally isn't.

Miss Smith is still undecided about her plans for the winter, but quite definite in her intention to come back to Carmel next summer, with a nucleus from the old company, lots of plans for improvements and full profit from a summer that has been rich in experience.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD Marilyn Doty, child violinist, who played the Bruch Concerto with the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra two years ago, under the direction of Carol Weston, was in Carmel last Friday with her mother. Marilyn has recently returned from a spectacular tour of the Scandinavian countries. Her playing so delighted King Haakon and Queen Maud of Norway that the golden-haired child was asked to play at the palace, and the invitation extended to her at the conclusion of the concert to play there whenever she visited Norway. Mrs. Doty brought Marilyn to Carmel, and arranged with the Denny-Watrous Gallery for the "Wunker-kind" to give a concert during November.

Prominent Woman Lawyer Visits Carmel, Confers With Co-Worker

SINCE the day when militant feminists were caricatured as wearing mannish garb and smoking big cigars, the causes which they advocated have ceased to seem outlandish, "careers" for women have become commonplace. Women lawyers, however, do not yet grow on every bush, and it was interesting to examine at close range one of the greatest of them; Mrs. Burnita S. Matthews of Washington, D. C., until last July the president of the National Association of Women Lawyers. On her first California trip and her first long vacation in many years Mrs. Matthews stopped in Carmel for a few days' visit with her friend and co-worker in many women's causes, Miss Maud Younger of the Woman's Party.

Dressed in a rose-colored summer frock and hat, with touches of violet, with wide, innocent violet eyes, delicate, cameo-like features, a reserved and almost shy manner, Mrs. Matthews would not be picked out of a crowd as one of the nation's leading legal lights. She must have handed some terrific surprises to superconfident masculine attorneys who have faced her in court. With a razor-keen mind, ready flow of forensics, we are told, she rises to superb command of the situation when the stage is set.

Mrs. Matthews is credited with having done much to advance the position of women in her profession, and with assisting in the framing of legislation protecting women. She is an ardent adherent of the "equal rights" amendment—reported with satisfaction that the national convention of women attorneys in Los Angeles in July, which brought her to the coast, endorsed the measure. She has drafted legislation for the Woman's Party and has conducted exhaustive research into the constitutions, laws and court decisions of the 48 states, to ferret out measures discriminating against women.

Heading the firm of Matthews, Berrien and Greathouse—all women, in Washington, Mrs. Matthews has been practicing since 1920, is an expert in condemnation cases, with a record of serving well the interests of her clients. She is a first cousin of Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

FOR DEAR OLD STANDARD

"Are you willing to fight for dear old Standard Oil?" is the latest catchword of the nation, following the beautiful manner in which an anonymous correspondent to a New York newspaper put the international situation into a nut-shell. Meanwhile, Standard Oil, or whatever company it was which effected the coup which has set the world by the ears, appears reluctant to step forward and claim credit for the fantastic development by which a little boy with a big red apple in his hand, seeing a bully bearing down on him, hurriedly sells his big red apple to a big boy and says, "Now you take care of it!"

Fifty years ago this would have all been done more diplomatically—yes, or 25 years ago. The trade would have been consummated behind locked doors, and presently we would have been inflamed with sympathy for the poor Ethiopians and hatred for that wicked Mussolini and then we would have been steaming over to fight for dear old Standard Oil under the guise of making the world safe for backward peoples, or something. Just as a few years ago we were ablaze over the fake Belgian "atrocity" stories, and at the effrontery of the Germans trying to keep our people from going on pleasure jaunts in waters full of mines and submarines, and presently we were fighting for the dear bankers, to save their British investments. Now, thank God, we have a chance to be cynical before hand, instead of after having several million of our soldiers killed and wounded.

There is no doubt we feel a sort of sneaking sympathy and admiration for the remarkable king of the Ethiopians. He appears to be a statesman of the first order, a wise and enlightened ruler. But are he and his people worth fighting a chivalric war for? Not at the cost and in view of the consequences of modern warfare. Mussolini is doing, a little late and in the light of glaring publicity, what all the rest of us did in an age when the world was less self-conscious. Spain and Portugal first, in the "age of discovery," followed closely by Holland, and then Great Britain, most signally successful, and other European countries as they piled pell-mell into Africa. And what did we great, enlightened North Americans do? We took a continent from a backward people, and practically wiped them out in the process. Whatever bad taste it leaves in our mouths, we civilized people will do well to look the other way while Japan gobbles Manchuria, and China, if she wants it, and Mussolini takes Ethiopia, if he can get it. Chivalry is apt to cost us dear, and we have plenty of unsolved problems here at home. And if our captains of industry wish to pour capital into trouble-zones, let them raise their own mercenary armies to defend their property.

THE GOLDEN STATE

New Yorkers, Iowans, and our Florida friends often accuse Californians of gross exaggeration when we speak of the simple and obvious fact that the Golden State is more richly endowed with nature's blessings than any other. But seriously now—do they really mean it?

At present motor tourists are pouring into California at a rate that bids fair to exceed the peak travel of 1929. Tourist travel is running some 40 per cent above last year's rate. Apparently those who have deprecated our statements have had their tongues in their cheeks all the time. And that is all right with us, especially when they continue to come and leave their millions out here each year.

 Within the coppice swell
 One monarch sings,
 And lays his slumberous spirit on the grass.

 Exultant knows
 The shore's complete surrender, and away,
 The Spring one true design,
 Autumn one rose
 That wears its deepest crimson for a day.*

SONNET

*You hold me, and your clasp is one of fire;
 It burns beyond the flesh into the soul.
 The flames are fanned by winds of swift desire,
 Yet you have touched be not—my heart is whole.
 My heart, so tremulous at beauty, knew
 Your sudden beauty, yet did not succumb.
 The soul will sing that finds another true:
 You called; unanswering, I stood silent, dumb.*

*Grieve not that thus we missed, each losing each,
 Who came so near to being one. The time
 May come, who knows, when each in other's reach
 Our souls shall meet in unison sublime.
 So weeping, laughing, each with separate path,
 We pass like two gods sundered by Fate's wrath.*

ROBIN LAMPSON in "Wings".

Here's Looking at You

By LOIS COLLINS PALMER

DURING recent months, several of Carmel's young people have left here to seek their fortunes in the cities. It is rather sad to think about, because we should have kept them here, somehow. Pleasant, likeable youngsters, dilettantes in one or more arts, not greatly gifted, but belonging in Carmel, nevertheless. Not only do we need them here, but we can't help thinking—what will become of them away from here? They say there is "nothing for them" in Carmel—yet in their eyes we see the wonder if there is anything for them anywhere. These are bad times in which to be young and unestablished.

It has long been the fashion to decry the restlessness and dissatisfaction that sends boys and girls to the city from village and country homes. But is anything done to encourage them to stay at home? Probably not, just as Carmel has taken no concern in the problems of her footloose young people.

It seems strange that in this enlightened age this matter of jobs and young people is still so haphazardly handled. Why should it not be a community problem, to see that there is some way for the boys and girls to fit into community life as they come out of school? If every town and village thus cared for her own, it would reduce the disorganized armies of young people storming the cities. It would raise the quality of small-town life, by introducing cultured, well-educated young people into key jobs.

This problem will not interest older workers who have "never had any trouble finding a job." It may provoke some sort of constructive thought on the part of those who have gone job-hunting in hard times.

HOW ABOUT THE FIREHOUSE?

The fire department set the stage well for a little public education the other night, when they got a lot of people together at Manzanita hall for a card party and then gave several demonstrations in fire prevention. Our department is unusually alert and well-equipped, carries on a work of high standards which bespeaks a splendid morale and a sense of civic obligation which paid, politically controlled departments often lack.

Which reminds us—wasn't there some talk of building a new fire house, a few months back? In the enthusiasm of gratitude for good work in the Golden Bough fire, Carmel was worked up to the point of "showing appreciation" by erecting adequate shelter for valuable equipment, a club room for the boys, and a place where one or more of them could be on constant duty. The months have gone by and nothing has been said or done. Isn't it about time to institute an inquiry as to what became of the firehouse project? Was it ditched deliberately, or accidentally? Or does it go into the category of other unfinished, forgotten city business?

HUEY'S DEATH WARRANT

Few Californians have cared very much about the antics of Huey Long up to now. In an impersonal way some of us were a little outraged that dictatorship, pure and simple, could flourish in Louisiana, one of the United States. But that did not limit our personal liberty, or take swindle-money out of our pockets, or bring any shame on our state.

Now, however, it is a different story. California, along with numerous other states, is going to suffer a direct out-of-the-pocket loss because Huey filibustered to death the third deficiency bill in the closing hours of Congress.

Controller Ray L. Riley has announced that old age pensions in California for 1935-37 will cost the state $16,885,000, or three millions more than if the third federal deficiency bill had passed. It provided appropriations to carry out the national Social Security Act.

Huey's unpopularity out here will be of a different sort from now on. Where once we were exasperated only faintly and often quite thoroughly amused by his grotesque capers, we now feel him to be our enemy. And likewise we may now come to realize that the United States senate, the only deliberative body on the face of the earth in which this could have happened, must revise its rules to end filibustering.

But as for Huey—well, he has signed his own death warrant. Perhaps it was worth three millions!

YOUTH IN POLITICS

A new force is making itself felt in California politics. Youth has begun to organize.

Already one group of young men who call themselves the "Crusaders" has spread throughout northern California from its recent birthplace, San Francisco. And another, the Cincinnatus, conceived in the same city, is planning to go statewide soon.

The purposes of these young people are high. Their aim is to contribute vigorous, clean, intelligent men to municipal and state government—men unencumbered by past political affiliations, friendships, animosities, and group alignments. And youth can do no harm to California politics, which has come to have about it a faint odor of mothballs and musty things.

Luisa Espinel Charms Audiences With Her Art and Personality

LUIZA ESPINEL, a great lady, understands the hearts of peasant women. Her program of folk songs, pantomime and dancing, culled from the rich lore of all the Hispanic countries, as presented at Denny-Watrous Gallery last Friday and Saturday evenings, had a warm humanness which bridged gaps of distance and cultural differences, and managed to show subtly the contrasts between the various peoples of Latin America, and even between provinces in Spain.

Not for months have we had among us an entertainer who so thoroughly captured her audiences with her own great personal charm. In seeking a sympathetic medium to present the simple folk arts, Espinel never loses her own patrician quality, a quality which transcendentalizes her material, escapes the vulgarity which is often associated with art forms close to earth.

A brief explanation preceded each group, aiding the audience to savor more fully the essential flavor of the province or country from which it arose. The artist's costumes were authentic and lovely, gave the key to her mood. In presenting songs from Tehuantepec her face was framed in a fluffy whimple; the use of this quaint headdress, she explained, dates from the time of the wreck of a Spanish ship laden with little girls' dresses. The Indian women tried to wear them, found that with their faces thrust through the neck-holes the white collars made an enchanting auriole. This for formal wear; for fiesta the garment is reversed, and the skirt of the little dress makes an even more gorgeous headdress.

The songs of Espinel were from Southern Spain, southern Mexico, the eastern Spanish provinces of Catalonia and Murcia—the latter with a strong Moorish quality—from Sinaloa and Sonora in northern Mexico, from the Caribbean countries—and here the negroid influence is felt—and from "Gipsy" Spain, Seville and Granada. Particularly charming was a group which her father sang to her when she was a little girl, two of them arranged for the concert stage by Shibley Boyes, her accompanist, who entered sensitively into the spirit of the whole interesting program.

Vitamin D Is New Source of Beauty

Again Hollywood turns the forces of nature to beauty's development! Science has proved that vitamin D plays an important part in beauty and health of the skin, according to Miss Vera Earp, consultant from the Colonial Dames Hollywood studio, who is making her headquarters this week at Pease, the Druggist, in Pacific Grove. "A substantial amount of vitamin-D is present in the skin during early childhood, but diminishes rapidly with maturity," she said, "and as it diminishes, complexion blemishes may appear and the skin loses its youthful tone and texture. Extensive tests show that when the elusive vitamin is given to the skin, through an activated cream, the youthful qualities reappear. Remarkable improvement has often been noted after only 14 day's use."

For several years, scientists and dermatologists the world over have been experimenting with this revolutionary new principle in cosmetic treatment, and Miss Earp says these experiments have culminated in a beauty development of major importance by the Colonial Dames laboratories.

Permission has been secured from Colonial Dames laboratories for Miss Earp to appear as the guest of Mr. Pease, where she has arranged to give a limited number of complimentary facial treatments and studio make-ups.

Old Homes Modernized

It may be that the home you so admire is but an old house in modern garb. Your home, too, can be converted into a smart, up-to-date residence. Nor is the cost excessive. Experienced men, such as ours, working with materials "bought right," can do wonders for an out-of-style house. Call ... let's talk over this business in a businesslike way. It will be to our mutual benefit.

PINE NEEDLES

NOEL SULLIVAN entertained at dinner Monday evening for his house guests, Arthur Lubin, stage and screen director and former actor—he played Brown in "The Great God Brown" in Irving Pichel's production—and Glenn Bowers, the celebrated new screen juvenile, who after making a sensation as the son of Babbitt in the picture of that name, is now deserting the films, going to China to live. Other guests were Dr. F. B. Averardi, who is to head the newly created department of Italian literature and language at U. C. L. A., Bill Rowell and Ella Winter. There was much talk of Italy, enlivened by Alvaradi's anecdotes of Mussolini, Duse, D'Annunzio and many other famed acquaintances.

Guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann for the week is Richard Buhlig, the celebrated concert pianist. He drove up from Los Angeles Saturday in company with one of his advanced students, Volya Cossack. Since spending his autumn vacation here just a year ago, Mr. Buhlig has had a busy winter, teaching in Los Angeles, giving a series of concerts in New York, and studying Shakespeare just for fun.

First social affair of the year for teachers of Sunset school will be in the form of a picnic, to be held after school next Thursday at the Indian Village in Del Monte Forest.

Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous entertained at tea Thursday afternoon for Luisa Espinel, her husband, Carlos Kassler, the muralist, and her accompanist, Shibley Boyes. Miss Espinel greeted numerous old friends, made during her four previous engagements here. She says that she particularly enjoys playing to Carmel audiences, for they put her "on her mettle," draw out her best performances. In addition to her tours during the past season, she also made a trip to South America seeking new program material in the songs and folklore of the various countries.

Mrs. F. L. Wulff has left for Sacramento after being here all summer. She is a member of the art association and exhibited a painting of a sleepy old mining town, which she called "Volcano," in the July show at the Gallery.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Baldwin of the Whaler, in Monterey, gave a picnic at the Douglas Short property down the coast on Monday, entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Rhys Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Short, Noel Sullivan and his house guests, Arthur Lubin and Glenn Bowers.

Myron Geahring, who has been staying with the Martin Flavins in the Highlands, will leave for the east soon, to supervise the production of his "Tapestry in Gray." Mr. Flavin will accompany him to New York. Later Mrs. Flavin and Miss Flavia will join him, the latter returning to dramatic school.

Mrs. Sherwood Hancock has returned to her home in San Francisco after visiting friends here.

Jack and Katharine Mershon will be back from Detroit at the end of this week. Before sailing for their home on the island of Bali late this fall they will probably devote an evening to a lecture and films of their life in the far-away tropical island.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Flavin entertained with a beach party recently celebrating the return of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Shea from their Mexican trip. Attending were the Rhys Williams family, Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Kocher and their children, Mrs. T. M. Oriley, Mrs. Lincoln Steffens and Pete, and Tom Collins.

Mrs. Estelle Havens-Monteagle and her two daughters, Miss Patricia and Miss Jehanne, have returned to their home in Pebble Beach after spending two months in Piedmont.

Fred Buck is spending this week and next at Glen Alpine, near Lake Tahoe, joining Mrs. Buck and the two children who went to the resort a fortnight ago. During his absence, his mother, Mrs. Kate P. Buck of Pasadena and Mrs. T. V. Moore of San Jose, are occupying his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Danysh have returned to San Francisco after a week's vacation here. He is an art critic and formerly had his own art gallery in the city. Mrs. Danysh (Eleanor Evans, the actress) was formerly literary editor of the San Francisco Argonaut.

Mrs. Leland D. Case of Chicago, wife of the editor of Rotary's international publication, has been staying in Carmel for several days. She was accompanied here by Dr. Powell, president of the Oakland Rotarians.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Miller have left after spending a week in Carmel.

Henry Cowell is coming down Monday, to attend the concert of Radiana Pazmor at Denny-Watrous Gallery.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Stahl had as week-end and holiday guests a group of interesting people from Oakland and Piedmont, several of whom are musicians, so that informal concerts enlivened much of their stay. In the house party were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Michael, Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Norheim, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Vart Tontjian and Mrs. Ann James.

Mrs. E. A. Hayden, her daughter, Mrs. F. K. Pomeroy and the latter's children, Morris and Jean, returned to Fresno this week after nearly two months in their Carmel home at Eleventh and Camino Real. Their stay was shorter than usual this year, as they visited the fair in San Diego early in the summer.

Mrs. Marie Gordon has returned to her home on San Antonio after being in San Francisco for two months.

In town this week for a few days was Miss Marjorie Pegram, who is staying in Portland at present.

Pinon Players In Last Performance

TONIGHT at the Carmel Playhouse the Pinon Players give their second of four performances of their final production of the 1935 summer season. The play is Sidney Howard's vastly entertaining comedy, "The Late Christopher Bean," of which the New York Times said,—"A funny comedy with an hilarious conclusion."

The presentation is the joint work of the company's two directors, Harriet M. Smith and Charles Monroe. Miss Smith directed during the early rehearsals, turning the production over to Monroe when she stepped on stage to play the role of Mrs. Haggett. The setting, a country doctor's living room, is the work of Stuart King.

Appearing in the Pinon Players final production are Franklin Wilbur as Dr. Haggett, Harriet Smith as Mrs. Haggett, Louise Symington and Patricia Lee as the Haggett's two daughters, and Ivy Van Cott as Abby, the family maid. Lloyd Weer, Evert Sholund, and Stuart King take part as art dealers and Yancey Smith as Warren Creamer, the village paper hanger.

Reservations for the three remaining Pinon Player performances can be made by telephoning Carmel 403 or calling at Staniford's drug store, where seats are on sale.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Devlin leave this week for their home in Sacramento, after a month in Carmel.

Radiana Pazmor To Sing Sept. 9

Radiana Pazmor, New York contralto, is on the coast visiting her parents in Berkeley for a short time, and will again sing in the Denny-Watrous Gallery—on Monday evening, Sept. 9. Radiana Pazmor's art of song has been described by many a critic: most apt is this from the "New York Times," following an appearance in that city: "She captures the soul of a song so that it becomes the intimate transcendentalized experience of her listeners."

As before, Miss Pazmor will accompany herself, giving the unique recital which she has created as her own expression of art in song.
